Dear Nort:

As we discussed, it will be my honor for St. Johns to distribute my paper on renewing cities in its Distinguished Paper Series. An abridged version is running in the ORER (Office of Real Estate Research) Newsletter. I think a more scholarly title would be appropriate for the Distinguished Paper Series, and I suggest this: "The Role of Ground Rent in Urban Decay and Revival". I am open to other suggestions if that does not serve.

Enclosed is a mailing list to supplement the several that you cited.

Proofreading, Urban Decay and Revival

19 April 91

1. Title. Delete "Reflections on the U.S. Experience." Too pensive: who wants to read someone else's "reflections." Replace with "How to Revive a Dying City," as we discussed. Here are some other choices. "How to Raise a City from the Dead." "How to Revive a Dead City." "How to Restore a Sick City." "How to Revitalize a Failing City." "A Fountain of Youth for Dying Cities." "New Cities from Old." Who am I to be teaching journalese to a journalist?! I've underlined the one RSF will use in its new reprinting.
2. Subtitle. "The Role of Ground Rent ..." sounds textbooky. Select from options above, or do without.
3. P.1, too bad to delete cases of E. St. Louis, Benton Harbor, et al. When a whole city gets sick and dies, it is dramatic. Also, Camden is picked up later, and the antecedent is now missing.
4. p.1, par.2, 3d line from btm., systemic, not systematic.
5. The editing has Britified, which is fine, but also "stodgified." It has deleted some of the individual idiom and vitality; replaced interesting, striking words with gray, mundane words and trite locutions. It has replaced active with passive voice; replaced verbs like "activate" with nouns like "the activation of." Rudolf Flesch teaches one to remove as many suffixes as possible, for more readable style; the editing has added suffixes and fillers. Examples follow.
 - p.1, last par, 1.1: "The situation is by no means without hope;"
 - col 2, par 1, lines 1-2
 - last par, 1.3, "have been influenced by the ideas of"
 - p.2, par 1, last lines, ...
 - par 2, 1.8, "magnitude"; par.4, 1.3, "to allow themselves to be overtaken by"; last lines, "knowledge of the necessary techniques" (do Brits really not understand "know-how"?)
 - par 5, 1.2-3, "settlements which owed their existenc to"
 - p.3, col 2, par 4, 1.1-2, "it appears as follows." That's more British than "it looks like this?"
 - 2nd last par, "all manner of fallacious explanations for the state of humanity." Whew!
 - p.7, you've taken all the punch out of this one, destroyed its nice rhythm, symmetry and impact.
 - I won't go on. Hope you see my point.
6. p.4, col 2, par 4, you butchered Macaulay. Check original. You can improve on Gaffney the barbarian, but Macaulay is a British classic and you are not free to edit him!
7. Spelling. p.1, col 2, par 2, San Francisco
 - par 3, Sacramento, California, whose once depressing centre
 - p.2, par 3, San Francisco again
 - p.3, par 1, 1.5, Sears Tower (you have Scars, I think).
 - col 2, par 2, 1.6, increasing ~~rewards~~ returns
 - p.4, par 5, last line, Beverly Hills (Beverley is in England)
 - p.8, par 4, 1.5, Breckenfeld (no "i")
 - 1.6, market, not marked
8. p.3, par 1. Re Newark, need to get in here that floor space in Newark rents for $25 psf. Otherwise the reference to same in par. 2 has no antecedent.

Will send the rest of this on Monday. Am in haste.

11. same, last line, delete "the sum of."
12. same, par 5, line 1, "$10,000 spent may also yield more than 10%, ..."
Also, do you want to change $ to L, here and throughout?
13. p.4, par 2, last line, "and allow for interest and depreciation."
14. p.4, par 3, line 5, "floor rentals are 3-5 times"
15. p.5, par 3, line 3, "units to rent. Although initially higher ..."

19. p.6, par 1, line 4, "parcellement"
20. p.7, col 2, par 5, line 2-3, "how it is possible"
21. p.8, par 3d from last, "offers them jobs producing those same jobs goods and services, "
22. p.8, col 2, par 1, line 5, delete "also" (redundant).
23. same, par 2, line 10, replace seventeenth by "eighteenth"
24. same, line 11, replace 1920s by "early 20th century"
25. same, line 12, replace "through the application of the" by "by applying"
26. same, replace "do what is required" by "get on with it."
27. p. 10, par 3, line 6, replace disbanded by "exterminated"
28. same, par 4, line 9, "attract"
29. p.11, col 1, 2nd par from last, 4th line from last, "(although blacks were not the only evictees)."
30. same, col 2, last par, line 1, "common kind of slum"
31. p.12, par 2, line 5, delete " - a result of not renewing" (redundant)

END OF PROOFING

Re proposed title, "beggars, bandits" are both snarl-words, warning readers to expect strong opinions (biases?) and recrimination, failing to signal the constructive intent, appealing to angry Poujade types. "Urban Renewal" is trite and verbless. How about something to stir the blood with reminders of ancient glories: "Restoring English Mastery"; "Reviving Brittania's Glory"; etc. Something Utopian, faintly evocative of "rule the waves," "loyal men," etc., yet practical and economical. "If you would move men," quoth Henry George, "it is not to their self-interest you must appeal but to their idealism." How about "New Hope for Old Cities," I like that best; alternatively, "New Life for Old Cities."

If you don't use one of those in your title, use one for my chapter!
